Statewide Motorized Trail System or SMTS

History of SMTS

The Statewide Motorized Trail System (SMTS) was the brainchild of Russ Sanford, founder of MORE (Motorcycle Owners, Riders, and Enthusiasts).

In 1974, legislation created the California Recreational Trails System mandating that “the director shall cause to be prepared, and continuously maintained, a comprehensive plan for the development and operation of a statewide system of recreation trails” and “shall prepare a guidebook, including trail maps, describing the system”.

In 1980, legislation appropriated $250,000 for an “OHV Recreation and Trail Study” that funded EDAW, Inc. to prepare a Statewide OHV Trails Plan that contained a Needs Analysis Report, a Trail Inventory Report, an Implementation Workbook, and a Draft Principal Report.

EDAW came up with a great plan showing corridors that could contain OHV trails from Mexico to Oregon and from the Pacific to Arizona and Nevada. These trails would be like the Pacific Crest Trail.

In 1984, the OHMVR Commission adopted the EDAW Plan, along with a numbering system. The intent was for the BLM and USFS to implement the SMTS by simply marking existing open trails to form a long distance point to point trail network following the general alignment of the EDAW plan.

Friends Of The Trail

Everything was in place for government to implement the system. There was a detail plan and there was plenty of Green Sticker money. In order help expedite the implementation of the SMTS by government; several motorcyclists formed a supporting organization called the Friends Of The Trail or FOTT. The friends held several meetings a year for several years. The meetings included representatives from Angeles and San Bernardino forests, the Desert District and state BLM offices, and State Parks.

We were told that the problem was that “Motorized Trail” sounded too harsh and if we would just change the name to the warmer and more friendlier Backcountry Discovery Route all would be wonderful and we would be accepted by all the tree huggers. In desperation, we tried this.

Government Achievements

In the 10 years following the spending $250,000 OHV dollars for the plan, the BLM did not designate one single SMTS route, the USFS only designated three, and the state never prepared a guidebook.

So much for government providing opportunities for OHVers. You can read a more complete history of the Statewide Motorized Trail System at www.SMTS.Info.

New Technology Solution

After the total failure of government to implement the SMTS, along came the Internet, GPS, and the popularity of Dual Sport bikes. With these innovations, the Friends realized that “we don’t need no stinking government to mark the SMTS”! We could develop and publish our own system!

We would simply ride it with a GPS and post the tracks on the Internet.

A General map of the system can be viewed and printed from www.SMTS.Info and the latest GPS tracks can be downloaded from www.GPSXchange.com.

FOTT Trail Work

The Friends started looking for obscure old trails that could be reopened and used to connect more heavily used trails and eliminate paved roads. Members went out with picks, shovels, and rock bars and cleared miles of old trails. Examples of old trails in Inyo forest that were reopened by FOTT are Woodcutter’s trail and Black Canyon. The work on these trails took several years, with a progress of only 0.1 mile per man per day. The really good news is that Inyo forest recognized all of these trails in their new Travel Management Plan and they are all on their new OHV map. Another trail that was opened by FOTT was the Slate Range trail.

Pick two of these four all day loops that you want to ride;

Coyote/Crooked Creek loop, 145 Mi, 105 Mi on gas. It goes up to Coyote flats at 10,500 ft, then down, down, down to Big Pine at 4,000 ft in only 7 Mi. After lunch and gas in Big Pine (45 Mi out), it goes out to Eureka Vly on the edge of Death Valley then over to Deep Springs Vly and back up to 10,500 ft over the White Mts and back down to Bishop (105 Mi). You can ride either half alone by taking a 17 Mi dirt route between Bishop and Big Pine. It is all road with some very difficult ones but spectacular views.

SMTS Short loop, 90 Mi, 75 on gas. It goes 17 Mi down the Owens Vly to Big Pine for gas. Then 20 Mi of trail and Jeep Rd up into the Inyo Mts to connect with the SMTS, then 50 Mi of the best single track parts of the SMTS. Lunch is on the trail at the "picnic table".

SMTS Long loop, 150 Mi, 95 on gas. It goes 57 Mi down the Owens Vly to Independence for gas. Then 90 Mi back to Bishop on the SMTS much of which is single track trail. Lunch is on the trail at the "picnic table".

Casa Diablo loop, 140 Mi, 75 on gas. It goes through the Volcanic Table Lands to Benton for gas, then up to Casa Diablo and down to Crowley Lake, over the dam to Tom's Place for Lunch. After lunch it goes down Sand Cyn with an optional 25 Mi side trip to the spectacular view from Wheeler Ridge. Then it goes through Round Vly and over the Tungsten hills to Bishop.
